Monthly Commentary

Today investors are concerned about a tightening yield curve, spikes in oil prices, and inflation running at its highest level in 40 years. In April, the Granahan US Focused Growth Fund underperformed with a return of -15.5% vs the Russell 2000 Growth index that was -12.3%. The largest detractors to performance were consumer discretionary and industrials, with technology, financials, and energy sectors also weighing on relative performance. Positive relative performance and its underweight versus the index made healthcare a contributor to relative performance. Real estate also contributed positively. We are investing in companies we believe are well-positioned to sustain secular growth over the foreseeable future. These secular growth companies with strong competitive positions are able to pass along higher prices, but of course, many times there is a lag. We realize downdrafts such as the one we are in the midst of are painful. We remain patient, strategic growth investors focused on our process with the goal of providing long-term outperformance for our clients.
